Enjoyable Philosophy

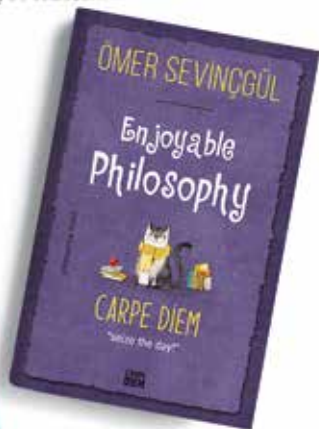

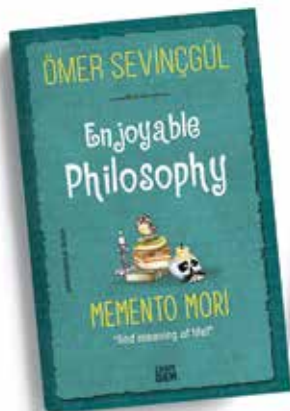

Read - Think - Ask
Question - Discover - Speak up!

If you are looking for a book of philosophy where you can read about philosophers' lives and basic philosophical information without getting bored, now you have found it. This book explains the essence, summary and foundation of philosophy with narratives. You will read mankind's adventures of two thousand five hundred years of thought. They explain basic ideas in a nutshell. With a plain, agile language and funny expressions. You will read it in one sitting and you'll love the charming drawings in it.

It all started when I bought a small detached house in one of the historical neighborhoods. During the renovation, I discovered a talismanic room in the basement. Something strange happened the night I started writing my philosophy books. I also saw that the famous philosophers, thinkers and sages, whose names are mentioned in the history of philosophy, are in my room with their transparent bodies.

Although it was a bit strange at first, I got used to it over time. Because it would be really interesting and enjoyable to write my philosophy books together with the fathers of philosophy. But the strangest thing is that some non-philosophers also came into this secret room.

I am now writing my philosophy books, which I have dreamed of for years, with my strange guests. Where it will end, I don't know yet either...

I BELIEVE SO I AM

If you start asking questions like "Who am I, where did I come from, what is the meaning of life?", the answer you receive is, "Are you crazy?" People would not assume that normal people also question the meaning of life. But always do renew yourself. Bring a new person out of you. Make a fresh start. Every new day is a door to a new world for you! Your questions are waiting for an answer. Untie them! Solving them means relaxing. Very few people can afford being themselves. If you want to be different, be yourself!

•Explains that thinking is the basic value that makes us human. •Emphasizes that the most important method to obtain information is to ask questions. •It is a guide for understanding youth problems and the world of young people.

A book that relieves you from the fear of death

You are intelligent person. One who reads, thinks, and wants to understand the meaning of life. Your mind just won't settle down. You have questions, interrogations. You don't want to be just anyone. You ask "Who am I? Why am I in this world, where am I heading, what will happen after death?" You can't live without thinking. You can't stop the voice of your heart. I know, sometimes you can't even fit into this world. The wings of your heart touch the skies. You believe with all your heart that an eternal life awaits you. You need a book which talks in your language, that has answers for all your questions, a book that "is as free as you". Whatever you say, it seems to me that we could be good friends.

This notebook will tell you about me. I want you to witness my life. After getting to know you, I decided to write my memories. I wrote it every night using the notes in my diary. Thinking of you, as if telling you. But I couldn't write the whole thing, time was not enough. I don't know if I succeeded.

If this text has any merit, it is sincerity. Everything I wrote is true. You can also remove this notebook and throw it away... Thus, the traces of a life will be erased. Because there is no other copy.

But I hope that others will read and know about them. Because I witnessed an important period. I have personally experienced some events. The pages are full of secrets. None of them should be kept as a secret.

Mervin

Mervin is a story of the development of a young german officer during World War II. We are taken in this life from his rose-colored years of naivete and innocence through his experience first hand with the destruction and atrocities of war.

We live his life with him as he grows up as a young man in Nazi Germany going to university in the midst of the rise of the Third Reich. We are with him when he falls in love for the first time and when he holds a weapon for the first time.

We are captured and taken to a prison camp along with him, and likewise we too are able to make our escape when he does. We are next to him the first time he meets an American soldier. All of these events and images together make up the portrait of Mervin, a young man who is seeking himself and finding meaning in a world which has been left in smoldering ruins around him. From those ruins, like his country and his world, he begins to rebuild himself.

Do Not Ever Look Back !

I'm being followed. They're after me. I've been involved in tricky business. I made terrible mistakes. I made them angry. I'm in trouble. The danger is great!

I don't know if I will survive. I don't think they will forget me or leave me alone. I have witnessed similar situations before. There is no pardon in their dictionaries.

I told my experiences in this book, because I wanted to leave a record behind. With all sincerity, without hiding or skipping any details.
